it really does piss me off that yet ANOTHER trans soul has been killed. I know we can't possibly know every single name of every single trans person who gets killed, rarely do we even SEE their trans identity acknowledged in the news -if they make it to the news- and I. I don't know. I'm angry. I didn't know any of the three recent losses, but I have been a surviving friend of someone who was trans and was killed for it. They didn't make the news. They were buried wrong and their deaths were basically their erasure from the world. I don't want it happening to any more trans people. I HAVE to believe that a world where trans people aren't hatecrimed and murdered is possible to build. I HAVE to. Otherwise what's the point?

It HAS to be possible. I don't want to give up hope.
